Yanna told Sid and William over dinner.

They both said it was not consistent with what actually happened, and she insisted it was.

She is just insanely jealous about you and Lee and all of us finally getting credit, which is just pathetic and sad.

The whole thing is very traumatic for them, because they had her in the ethics class, and it is so completely inconsistent with her public character.

A story that just came up, is that Elin raised the issue of lead in blood in Flint at the party, and Mona did not want to do it.

And that Mona said that Elin should send a one page position piece on why Mona should do it.

And it was only after reading the one pager, that reluctant Mona was talked into doing the blood lead analysis.

Can you confirm or deny this is how it went down?
